

JAZZ in the SPIRIT

His Eye is on the Sparrow

Someone once described jazz as
 "Musicians showing off"

Overview

In many ways Jazz is more expressive and individual in that it leaves a great deal of creativity to the players to develop the music as they feel it while they are playing.

Even though there has not been a great deal of 'Christian Jazz' recordings – it is in reality an ultimate style to express worship as praise. Stylistically it allows the musician the greatest freedom to express his faith in the music.

As such this collection of great hymns and songs of faith is a collection of worship where the musicians have the freedom to interpret the music of these timeless hymns and choruses. Jazz has always been and remains today, a living art form, always changing, always growing. It's expressive, it's enriching and it is here to stay.
